

Army Antiterrorism

MISSION

The Army executes an antiterrorism program to prevent terrorist attacks against the Army community in order to protect personnel and ensure continuance of essential military missions. The Army is prepared to defend against and respond to terrorist attacks where necessary.

VISION

We accept the obligation to prevent terrorist attacks targeting the Army community, and respond effectively to an attack should our enemy discover and exploit a gap or seam in our protective posture.

Army Antiterrorism

Antiterrorism Enterprise Portal (ATEP)

What is ATEP?

ATEP provides substantial information, resources, and tools for those responsible for planning and implementing antiterrorism programs and plans including community awareness. The ATEP website resides on the Provost Marshal General Portal.

Why antiterrorism knowledge is important?

- Terrorism is an enduring, persistent, worldwide threat to our Army communities.
- Extremist beliefs continue to have an anti-western and anti-U.S. orientation.
- The insider threat and active shooter threat remain present and real.
- Our Army must sustain a strong defensive posture to prevent violent acts and protect Army resources (people, infrastructure and information).
- iWATCH Army information and training tools are located on ATEP.

Army OneSource (AOS)

What is AOS?

The AOS website is the primary online source of information for Army family members. A "featured programs" iWATCH Army link at the bottom of the home page provides antiterrorism information:

- iWATCH Army information and videos
- Antiterrorism awareness quarterly theme information
- Information on the use of social media
- Information on insider threats and active shooters—what families need to know
- Cyber threat awareness information
- Information papers for parents, children, and Family Readiness Groups
- Self-help guides for individual protection
