OHIO NATIONAL GUARD

VOLUME 4, EDITION 12 DECEMBER 1, 2012

Capt. Nicole Ashcroft, 179 AW Public Affairs

As the sun set behind an American flag waving over the Mansfield Lahm Airport on Saturday, Nov. 3, a 179th Airlift Wing C-27J Spartan touched down after its crew joined forces earlier in the day with personnel from the Maryland and Mississippi National Guards, to provide airlift support for Hurricane Sandy relief efforts.

"We have been making the argument, and Congress has been listening, that the C-27J is the right platform for the National Guard," said Maj. Gen. Deborah A. Ashenurst, Ohio adjutant general. "The performance of the C-27J while deployed overseas has proven this is the right aircraft for the time-sensitive, mission-critical airlift mission, and this domestic deployment shows how important an asset the C-27J is for the nation's governors, making it possible for the National Guard to deliver assistance quickly to citizens in need."

These Citizen-Airmen and -Soldiers embody the National Guard's motto of "Always ready; Always there," by pulling together aircraft and personnel across multiple state borders and differing branches of service in order to provide assistance for their fellow Americans in need. As part of "Operation Guardian Big Apple," less than 12 hours after getting the initial call, the 135th Airlift Group in Baltimore, 179th Airlift Wing in Mansfield, Ohio, and 186th Air Refueling Wing in Meridian, Miss., each supplied one C-27J Spartan to airlift personnel and equipment into New York, where direct relief support for the citizens of New York City will be provided.

All three states worked together seamlessly to pull together a detailed multi-branch support mission. The day began with three C-27Js departing their respective wings to pick up an initial forward group of equipment and personnel.

Every Airman and Soldier traveling in the forward group shared words of pride and excitement about the opportunity to help their fellow American citizens. Many said it's what the National Guard does - citizens helping the citizens throughout their communities nationwide, whenever and wherever necessary.

"Today's mission highlights the core value of the National Guard," said Maj. Jeff Capretto, a 179th pilot who returned from Afghanistan earlier this year and an Avon Lake, Ohio, native, who flew Ohio's C-27J on Saturday into New York. "What a great opportunity to be involved with the relief support, especially on the U.S. home front."

Col. Gary McCue, 179th wing commander said, "I am very proud of our Airmen, and how quickly they responded to the call for help. We spent 10 months in Afghanistan, and now what a great feeling to perform the mission for the citizens of the US! This is the other half of the National Guard mission set, and we're excited to have shown the capability of the C-27J and our Airmen!"

Three Ohio cities rank in top ten for veterans transitioning out of military

McLean, VA—Pittsburgh ranks as the top place in the nation for veterans to transition from combat boots to civilian shoes, according to a new study commissioned by USAA and Military.com.

The "Best Places for Veterans" list identifies U.S. metro areas that offer America's most recent veterans more opportunities to find a job or go to college while providing a higher quality of life in an affordable location. Here is the entire top 10 list:

- | | |
|--------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1. Pittsburgh, PA | 6. Warren, MI |
| 2. Phoenix, AZ | 7. Ann Arbor, MI |
| 3. Dallas, TX | 8. Cincinnati, OH |
| 4. Cleveland, OH | 9. Columbus, OH |
| 5. Atlanta, GA | 10. St. Louis, MO |

"Today's veterans are battling a highly competitive job market and need to proactively plan for life after the military," said Scott Halliwell, a certified financial planner at USAA. "This study allows us to help recent and soon-to-be veterans identify preferred locations throughout the U.S. where they can launch a civilian career and use the GI Bill to further their education."

Sperling's BestPlaces reviewed variables in 379 major U.S. metropolitan areas, including:

- Employment opportunities and sectors that align with military skills sets such as defense, engineering, medical services and aviation, as well as the overall jobs climate based on unemployment rate and recent job growth.
- Presence of colleges/universities, as well as quality of local primary schools.
- General quality of life and pocketbook issues such as affordability, crime rate, taxes and recreation opportunities.

Drew Vogel, Ohio Veterans Home

The Ohio Department of Veteran Services (DVS) operates two nursing homes and a domiciliary to serve veterans in need of medical care.

The Ohio Veterans Home – Sandusky, situated on 99 acres near Lake Erie, opened its doors in 1888. “The American Civil War produced OVH’s first resident,” said Rick Hatcher, Superintendent of the Veterans Homes. “Our motto is ‘Serving Those Who Served’ and we remain ever mindful of the sacrifices numerous Ohio veterans have made since that time to present day.”

The Sandusky Home has been continuously in service for the past 124 years; with 427 beds it is the largest nursing home in Ohio.

The Ohio Veterans Home –Georgetown is located in Brown County, in southern Ohio east of Cincinnati. The 168-bed Georgetown Home opened in 2003.

Both homes feature Standard Care for general nursing home residents, as well as Special Care for residents with dementia. Numerous in-house activities and outings are provided at each home as well as a full agenda of social and spiritual services.

Although the cost is based on a veteran’s ability to pay, the maximum cost is only about one-third of that of a proprietary nursing home.

In 2011, the Georgetown Home became the first state veterans home in the country – there are about 140 – to open a dedicated in-house hospice unit. The facility provides the physical plant, food and medicine. Stein Hospice provides the staff.

“It’s a public-private partnership,” Hatcher explained, “that provides value, not only to veterans, but to the taxpayers of Ohio as well.”

The Sandusky facility also features a 293-bed Domiciliary (“Dom”) in which Veterans who need medical care, but are capable of living independently, can reside at a reasonable cost.

Any veteran who served during a time of war, received an Honorable Discharge and has lived in Ohio a cumulative total of one year is eligible for admission. More information can be obtained by calling 866-OHIO-VET.

ONGEA membership provides many benefits

The ONGEA is the state branch of the Enlisted Association of the National Guard of the United States – EANGUS. Together, with members from the National Guard Association of the United States (NGAUS), the Adjutant General's Association (AGAUS), and other members of the "military coalition," the enlisted association has the clout and presence to fight on Capitol Hill for the equipment, benefits, and missions you have earned and deserve as members of the National Guard. In addition, we know who to call in Columbus to go to battle for you.

Strength comes in numbers. You can be an active member as a reserve soldier or as a retired one. The larger our membership, the louder our voice; we need everyone engaged to fully exercise our voice.

One of the benefits of membership in a professional association is the "situational awareness" it provides you (active or retired) on issues facing the National Guard. The Enlisted Association sends out e-mail alerts regularly informing our members when there is legislation that concerns us that is being considered in Congress. We alert you so you can make an informed choice as to whether to contact your Senator or Representative and express your view.

In 2012, ONGEA awarded over $6,000 in educational scholarships to family members in Ohio. You also obtain discounts on products. For the complete listing of member benefits, please visit our website at www.EANGUS.org or www.ONGEA.org.

For a retiree, membership is $25.00 a year. As an active Guard member, it's $15 for an E-5 or below and $30 for an E6 or above. Either enlisted or officers can join ONGEA. For more information, contact Sgt. (Ret.) Neal Powers at Glen43@zoominternet.net.
